The Literacy Cooperative invites you to make a transformative commitment to build brains, young and old, and play a key role in a story that jumps off the page as literacy advances in the community.

Cuyahoga County’s literacy crisis will persist for generations unless progress is accelerated in preparing young children for kindergarten and helping more adult residents secure at least a high school education.

Despite encouraging progress made through the collaborative efforts of literacy programs, funders, and public officials, too many young adults and young children in Cuyahoga County are unprepared for the future. This not only limits their individual opportunity, but it weakens the current and future economic health of the county.

In Cuyahoga County, 42% of all children enrolling in kindergarten in the 2018-19 school year were not adequately prepared to succeed, and 10% of all adults - 101,221 residents - did not have a high school diploma as of 2017.
